

THE NEW FACE OF AFFORDABLE HOUSING

Affordable Housing Today

Like other rental housing, affordable housing today is developed, owned and managed by the private sector. It must meet all local development codes and standards.

As with other housing, the owners of affordable rental housing pay property taxes, have admission standards, and have established rents and rules that all residents must adhere to.

Today's affordable housing residents are like any other County renter, but with lower incomes due to age, disability, and lower paid employment.

THE NEW FACE OF AFFORDABLE HOUSING

Today's affordable housing residents are sons and daughters, children and grandchildren, parents and grandparents, people with disabilities, people who work in our community at modestly paid jobs, and people who grew up in Anne Arundel County and want to stay here. The faces of affordable housing are our faces, the faces of families and friends, and the faces of hard working people who help make our lives better with their labor.

Today's Affordable Housing is Workforce Housing

The majority of able bodied residents within these communities are employed and support the local economy.

Today's Affordable Housing is Family Housing

Provides stability for our limited income families, improving employment, health and educational outcomes.

Today's Affordable Housing is Senior Housing

Provides secure community with connections to support services for our aging residents, deferring more costly options such as assisted living and nursing home care.

Today's Affordable Housing is Housing for the Disabled

Establishes an affordable community with amenities designed to accommodate individuals with disabilities so they may thrive.
